FRIDAY, MARCH 4, 1904.

It pays to advertise: On February 19 the News inserted a few lines calling for candidates for the Legislature from Volusia county. The results can be seen in our announcement column on this page.

It is estimated that the ticket to be used at the primary in Duval county will be 5 1/2 feet long; the one used in Volusia county will probably not be more than 5 feet. Ballot boxes will have to be about the size of a piano box.

This is a strange old world. The very papers that ridiculed and denounced Hanna two months ago are now filled with editorial eulogies of the "dead statesman". Perhaps they think a good Republican is like a good Indian.

Judge Gaudin of Titusville and DeLand is a candidate to represent the Second Congressional District at the National Democratic Convention to nominate a president and vice-president. The judge is one of the best known Democrats in the district, and will doubtless be elected without opposition.

A fierce battle is being waged in the First Congressional District, where Robert McNamee is a contestant for Sparkman's seat in the House. Both are making valiant efforts for the labor vote, which will be divided, as is usually the case. Sparkman has the advantage of being "in", but McNamee is a born fighter and has a host of friends behind him.

Will the DeLand Record, and those other papers in the Seventh Judicial Circuit, which are demanding that all editors announce themselves either for or against Taliaferro, kindly inform a long-suffering public just how they stand on candidates for the state's attorneyship in this circuit? Is it against Jones or Butt? The Record will please get off the fence and be a man, a mouse, or a long-tailed rat. The people of this circuit are more interested in the state's attorney contest than they are in United States senator or congressman, or governor. A state's attorney has more power, more direct responsibility, and is of more vital interest to the people of his circuit than almost any officer. The attorney has it in his power to be an oppressor or a deliverer of the people. How does the Record stand on this question?

Your Uncle Bob D. cock home from Congress theavis will be—and the we to. in a few days. y he will make the fur fly with a caution.

From what the News can learn, Charles Dougherty, candidate for Congress, is receiving most hearty and substantial support from his Jacksonville friends and has again started out campaigning with his old-time vigor. He spoke at Miami on Wednesday. Mr. Alexander and Mr. Dougherty, both from Volusia county, will set the other candidates a merry pace from now until May 10, and the prospects are that one of these two will represent the Second Congressional district in Congress for the next two years.

The following theme was written by Amanda Larson:

Our Visit to the County Judge's Office.
One afternoon not long since, our Civil Government class paid a visit to the county judge's office that we might learn more about his duties and see how his work is actually done. We were received very cordially, and found so many things to instruct and interest us that we could not get through in one afternoon, so we were glad to accept an invitation to come again. Our second visit was just as interesting as the first, and we left hoping that we might soon call in to see the judge again.

Our time was very limited, but Judge McCrory showed us and told us all he could about marriage licenses, deeds, wills and many other things. It is a pity that all of us, being girls, cannot put in practice our knowledge of how to get a marriage license. Perhaps, though, we may be able to instruct someone else in whom we are very much interested.

We went into the vault connected with the county judge's office, and saw the large books where he keeps a record of all marriages, deeds, wills, etc. These books are so large that each shelf in the bookcase is provided with a roller, to assist in handling such heavy volumes. There is another large case provided with small drawers in which all important documents are kept on file. As this case is about full, he has another one, but he has not begun to use this one yet.

It was very interesting to look at the marriage licenses and wills of persons whom we really knew. Perhaps some other civil government class will be just as interested in our wills, etc., as we were in those that we saw.

When the judge showed us about making out marriage licenses, he said he often performed the ceremony right there in the office, and we wished very much that we could be present on such an occasion.

The next day when we were visiting the county superintendent of schools we heard a colored man inquiring very anxiously for the judge. We at once thought perhaps he was after a marriage license, and on inquiry we found this to be the case, and that Judge McCrory was going to perform the ceremony. Superintendent Fish asked the judge to let us know when he was ready; so when the preliminaries were completed we were invited in and saw the knot tied in short order. One of the girls remarked if that was all there was to it she would not mind doing that herself. She was informed, however, that that was only the beginning of it, and that it was easy to tie a knot with your tongue that you could not untie with your teeth.

We enjoyed our visits very much, and certainly learned more than we could have from any text book.

Cured Consumption.

Mrs. B. W. Evans, Charwater, Kan., writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup and it cured him. That was six years ago, and since then we have always kept a bottle in the house. We cannot do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal." 25c, 50c, and $1. At all druggists.

Debt and Happiness.

Blodgett—I should think it would be awful to be in debt the way you are. Tidd—Oh, I don't know. I've known lots of people who owed money, and I've known some who had money owed to them, and the latter always seemed to be the more unhappy.—Boston Transcript.

A Paradox.

"Will you please insert this obituary notice?" writes a correspondent to the editor of a leading daily paper. "I make bold to ask it because I know the deceased had many friends who'd be glad to hear of his death."

Invaluable for Rheumatism.

I have been suffering the past few years with a severe attack of rheumatism, and found that Ballard's Snow Liniment was a real remedy. The fact that it brought back my old-time vigor and gave me satisfaction and tended to alleviate my pains." March 24th, 1902. John C. Degnan, Kinman, Ill. 25c, 50c and $1.00. All druggists.

Unique Jewels.

There was at one time a wonderful emerald extant with white corners, while all the rest of the stone was of its proper velvety dark green hue. This stone was used as an illustrative proof that emeralds were born white, but ripened into the right color in the mine, time working one of its usual miracles on the crystal. Indeed, beryl, that pale green stone exactly like the emerald in all essentials save color, has often been called the mother of emerald.

Aquamarine is a beryl—in other words, an emerald emerald, not yet matured into the proper tint, and of this the commoner varieties are by no means rare. Yet it is to be doubted whether these emerald stones would ever mature into the true and lawful lustrous emerald.—London Queen.

The Best Cough Syrup.

B. L. Apple, ex-Probate Judge, Ottawa Co., Kansas, writes: "This is to certify that my wife and daughter, Elsie, who were both afflicted with whooping cough, were cured by the use of Dr. J. C. Degnan's Cough Syrup. They were both cured in a few days. I have used it since then and it is a great remedy for all kinds of coughs."—Boston Globe.

The News has submitted photographs of a number of Volusia county officials, together with locks of their hair and the date of their birth, to a noted phrenologist, astrologer and sooth-sayer, and will, from time to time, publish the result of his cogitations. This week we present the "horoscope" of

SAMUEL S. WILTON.

County Assessor of Taxes.

No. 2.—This is a clean, jolly face. The body that bears it knows the good things in life and enjoys them to the full. But he is also willing for others to enjoy them and is always ready to help them do so. He loves money—but he loves it for the good he himself, his family and his friends can get out of it. The eye shows keen business sagacity; the ability to "strike while the iron is hot." He is not afraid to risk his money in an investment which promises well, and if he loses the world knows nothing about it; if he wins he shares his gainings with those who have his respect and his friendship. He is a hospitable man—his home is the castle of his friends.

The lock of hair indicates a happy married life, the love of children and home.

The star under which No. 2 was born indicates comfortable old age—not wealth as wealth is termed today, but all he needs. He will retire from business and political cares in early middle life and devote his time to the care of a large estate of some kind, his home being the gathering place of hundreds of friends, who will spend weeks at a time within his doors.

Lord Palmerston.
Herbert Paul in his "History of Modern England" thus describes Lord Palmerston:

This "gay, eupeptic son of Belial" was now in his sixty-second year. No English statesman except Walpole and Pitt has passed so large a proportion of his public life in office. The ratio was forty-nine years of office to fifty-five of public life. While the Tories were in power he was a Tory. For more than twenty years, from 1807 to 1828, he was secretary of war, or, as we should now say, financial secretary to the war office. During that long period he seldom spoke, and Channing, who spoke for pleasure, complained that "he could not bring that three-decker Palmerston into action." Lord Palmerston was a man of fashion and a man of pleasure. His house was a social center of much importance. But he was also pre-eminently a man of affairs who never neglected his business and was always master of his subject. When he returned to office under Lord John Russell in 1846 he was compared with him for knowledge of foreign policy except Metternich and Guizot. He took difficulties as a bold rider takes a still fence, relying on his horse and his luck. Hitherto his luck had been very good, and his horse was a splendid animal. In 1846 England was undoubtedly the first power of the world, as France was the second.

The Queer Sunfish.
The sunfish or headfish is fairly common in the vicinity of Santa Catalina Island. Its general appearance is oblong and deep, very thin or compressed, cut off (truncated) behind, so there appears to be no tail, a mere rim of movable flesh taking the place, which has a very limited use in the slow locomotion of this extraordinary fish. The skin is hard and coarse, rough, scaly and covered with fat spines, the entire skin covered with a thick coating of slime, which appears to be a world in itself for numerous parasites which prey upon the fish.

This extraordinary fish is one of the few fishes of little or no use to man. "I am of the opinion," says a naturalist, "that the hard skin might be utilized. I once learned that the boys of a certain village in Maine were anxious to secure the muscular envelope of a specimen caught by me to use as a rubber. They cut the hard skin off the fish and used it as a rubber."—New York City.

Stolen Treasures.
Some of M. Gerome's artistic treasures had a curious origin. When in Constantinople once he was brought into contact with a worthy man who sold most beautiful objects at exceedingly reasonable prices. It turned out afterward that he was the keeper of one of the imperial palaces and had been in the habit of laying under contribution the cabinets intrusted to his care. His end, however, was not encouraging, for one day he was caught in the act and subsequently impaled.
